Literal Oll on Troubled Waters.

A most striking experiment has been tried at the Scottish port of Peterhead. A feature of speech, for hitherto it has been little else, was turned into a literal fact. Oil was poured on the waves with the result of calming the fair way at the harbor's mouth, so that a small boat could enter in a storm. It has long been known that oil exerted this effect. It does so by simply destroying the friction of the air on the surface of the water. It smooths the way of the wind, and, consequently calms the surface of the sea. Its accidental application has probably produced the wide-spread knowledge of its effect, which has made the figure of speech universal. We are not aware that any scientific attempt has ever been made to apply oil to the waves. At Peterhead pipes were laid down and a large quantity of oil was forced through them. The oil at once rose to the surface and spread in a thin film on the water, with the effect of reducing the roughness to a mere swell. Small boats were thus able to enter the harbor which could not have ventured to do so in the rough sea which was running before the oil was spread upon it. Small bonds were supported to harbor which could not have ventured to do so in the rough sea which was running before the oil was spread upon it. So far, therefore, the experiment was successful. Whether it opens up the possibility that harbor mouths may be made generally safe in rough weather by the expenditure of a few hundred gallons of oil can perhaps only be decided by further trisls. The machinery is, however, laid down, and further tests will, therefore, be easily applied. It is evident that the effect, as described, is one which would make all the difference between safety and danger in a harbor frequented by fishing boats, and it is in frequented by fishing boats, and it is in such harbors that it is likely, if anywhere, to be of permanent value.—London Daily News.

Ruther Carlous Law in England.

Rather Carlons Law in England.

A British Member of Parliament, Mr. Macfarlane, has been comparing some of the sentent of recently infleted upon offenders of various grades, and he has reached the conclusion that, in the eyes of British law, it is a much lighter offense to kick a woman to death than to pick her pocket. A man who kicked his wife to death was sentenced to six weeks' hard labor, and in the month following a man who had picked a woman's pocket of nine shillings was sentenced to penal servitude for ten years. Nor are these exceptional cases. The penalty in a case of knocking down a wife and kicking her savagely in the face was three months' hard labor; for knocking down and kicking a woman, a fine of £4; for trying to kill a wite with a razor, being a second offense, twelve months. Against these are set such sentences as for stealing coals to the value of two shillings, eight months' hard labor; for stealing a watch, five years' penal servitude. It would be interesting to inquire how much of this scandalous leniency to brutes is due to the ancient tradition that makes a man's wife his slave. But it does not appear necessary that the woman attacked should be the man's wife in order to give him practical immunity. In a case of violent a-sault upon a woman in the street, the ruffian was fined forty shillings, and in another case where three men ill-treated and killed a woman they were imprisoned, one for sixteen months and the others for six months, while a man who stole a knife and some keys got five years. All this seems to show that the equal protection of Euglish law is not meant to extend to women.—Philadelphia Times,

The Tichborne Case. The main facts of the story are that Roger Tichborne was heir to a baronetcy and estate yielding $100,000 a year. He entered the army, remained three years, and after visiting South America disapparented, and is suppressed to have been peared, and is supposed to have been lost at sea. His mother, proud and insane, was unwilling that the estate should fall into the hand of the child of a detested daughter-in-law, and accordingly advertised in Austrailia for the missing heir. Arthur Orton, a butcher and a low adventurer, immediately went to England, and, backed by speculators and accomplices, claimed the estate. The mother was an easy dupe, and though the claimant was wonderfully unlike Roger Tichbourae, the swindle progressed famously. The trial of the case occupied six years, and Orton was convicted of being a perjurer and imposter. The case occupied thirty-one days in opening, forty-seven in summing up, the Chief Justice took eighteen days in delivering his charge, and the whole case cost over $1,250,000. It is the most celobrated lawsnit on record. advertised in Austrailia for the missing

The ancient custom of sending a present of fine cloth to certain high officers of State and gentlemen of her Majesty's household has lately been observed by a committee of the Court of Aldermen of London. The custom seems to have originated in a desire to encourage com-petition in the manufacture of fine goods.

The Morality of Failing. It is better to be robbed than to be a

The better to be robbed than to be a robber. And sometimes it is better to fail than to succeed. This thing called failure is not such a fearful thing as the prosperous world would suggest it to be. Failure is only lesser success. All men can not organize a triumph. Defeat is the fate of many. The only successful failures are the ones that are honestly made. When a man's judgment has miscarried and brought him a wrong issue, ha is not to be outlawed for it. When the misfortunes or "cussedness" of others drive him into defeat, there is no reason why he should be hated. The world will have charity for the failure where it has been inevitable and honest. It hates a sham failure even worse than does a sham success. There, is one feature connected with failures practiced by nearly all failing concerns, but that does not make it any less objectionable. We refer to the custom, so universal with all failing firms and institutions, of preferring wealthy creditors. The question naturally comes up: Why should they be preferred? When a mercantile house fails, it usually prefors its banker, and fixes everything up with him, so that he is no loser. When a bank fails, it has been observed, that it always prefers its large, rich creditors. This system is corrupt in morals, and manifests a contemptuous deference to wealth that is humiliating. Why should any failing concern prefer the wealthy over the poor? Every settlement should be promoted as a matter of justice, but if any leniency or favors are to be shown, they should be extended to the poor. The rich can sustant their loss. They have other resources and larger opportunities; but the poor have the last prop taken, and know not where to look for another. Why should large creditors be satisfied first of all? The world has got all wrong on this business transaction. If it intends to be honest and just, it must turn around. Public opinion must make it unpopular, because it is wrong for banks and merchants to shield and favor the rich and powerful, while they oppress the poor a an improvement in the morality of fail-ures.—Indianapolis Herald.

Influence of Association.

Influence of Association.

I remember once seeing an advertisement in the papers with which I was much struck, and which I will take the liberty of reading: "Lost, in the Temple Coffee House, and supposed to have be taken away by mistake, an oakon stick, which has supported its master not only over the greatest part of Europe. stick, which has supported its misser not only over the greatest part of Europe, but has been his companion in his jour-neys over the inhospitable deserts of Africa. Whoever will restore it to the waiter, will confer a very serious obliga-tion on the advertiser; or, if that be any object, shall receive a recompense very much above the value of the article restored." Now, here is a man, who buys a sixpenny stick, because it is useful, and totally forgetting the trifling causes which first made his stick of any consequence, speaks of it with warmth consequence, speaks of it with warmth and affection; calls it his companion. and would hardly have changed it, per-haps, for the gold stick which is carried before the king. But the best and the strongest example of this, and of the strongest example of this, and of the customary progress of association, is the passion of avarice. A child only loves a guinea because it shines; and, as it is equally splendid, he loves a gilt button as well. In after life he begins to love wealth because it affords him the comforts of existence, and then loves it that he denies himself the comso well that he denies himself the com-forts of life to increase it. The uniting idea is so totally forgotten that it is completely sacrificed to the ideas which it united. Two friends unite against the person to whose introduction they are indebted for their knowledge of each other; exclude him from their society and ruin him by their combination,-Sidney Smith.

MR. CANNON'S RENOMINATION

Although the mutations of the recent apportionment bill have ent us off from the bulk of the district repre-ented by Hon Joseph G. Cannon. for the past ten years, his renomination by the Republicans of the new Robert T. Lincoln, secretary of war. Fifteenth district is an event in which Macon county takes a large degree of pride, and the REPUBLICAN desires to extend its hearty congratulations to the nominee and his constiments, for it is not without a very considerable amount of satisfaction that we remember that it was in these columns Mr. Cannon was first publicly mentioned as a suitable person to represent us in the congress of the United States. In our issue of March 28, 1872, in an editorial upon the political situation, the following paragraph appeared:

" In looking over the district we have opmon, would be so likely to harmonize add such strength to the ticket, as Hon. loseph G. SPRINGFIELD, ILL., July 18.- Mrs.

Mary Lincoln, widow of the late

President Abraham Lincoln, breathed her last at 8:15 this evening, at the residence of her brother-in-law, Hon, Minian W. Edwards. The public is aware that for some time past she has been an invalid, and her movements from time to time since the tragic death of her husband have been noted. Last March she, after a prolonged visit to New York, where she was under medical treatment, re turned to Springfield and made her home with her sister, Mrs. Edwards. Since that time until her death she was under the care of Dr. Dresser, an eminent physician of this city. Occasionally she was driven out in a carriage, and, aside from these times. none but her near relatives were per mitted to see her. Her death may be considered a sudden one, nothing in her case being looked upon as alarming. The immediate cause of her death was apoplectic paralysis. The last words she was heard to speak were spoken last evening at 10 o'clock, when she looked at Mr. Edwards and at water spouts visited this vicinity said: "I am dying," and from that last evening. UNION BERVICES. The Sacramental Meeting Largely Attend

There was no preaching at the First M. E. church on Sunday, it having been arranged to hold a Union Sacramental meeting at that commodious house of worship at 10:30 a. m., in which the congregations of three Methodist churches united. The large audience room was nearly filled with Christian people, who assembled at the hour named to renew their covenant with the Almighty. The various ministers first partook of the bread and the wine, typical of the body and blood of the Lord, and then the congregation in order knelt at the altar. In

SPEERS PORT GRAPE WINE

FX(11) END FOR LADIES AND WILKLY PER-SONS AND THE AGED

SPEER'S PORT GRAPE WINE. FOUR YEARS OLD. THIS CFLEBRATED NATIVE WINE is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape, much in this country. Its invaluable Tonic and Strengthening Properties

Tonce and Strengthening Properties are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the Grape, produced under Mr. Spect's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed.—The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debitiated, and suited to the uncertainty that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect a Wing to be reliable on.

SPEER'S P. J. SHERRY. The P , SHRIRY is a wine of Superior character, and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made. For Purity, Eichness, Flavor and Medicinal Properties, it will be tound unexceiled.

SPEERS P. J. BRANDY This BRANDY stance unrivatied in thi country, being far superior for medicinal pur-

IT IS A PURE distillation from the grape, It has a delicate theor, similar to that of the grapes, from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first-class families.
